KANDINSKY / RECONSTRUCTION

Create a minimal image on a deep black background: a human figure in profile, sculpted from light and shadow. The head is lowered, one arm raised before the face, the other crossing the chest. A bright mesh-like pattern moves across the skin like sunlight reflected on water, turning the body into a light-sensitive surface. The face stays partly hidden, hands and parts of the body almost white. Keep the image ambiguous between living body, marble sculpture, and digital projection. No costume, props, or surrounding environment.

Create a pencil drawing on a white paper-like background. Two figures stand side by side in black uneven graphite lines: on the left, a short figure in heavy dark clothing with two sharp horn-like protrusions and a stretched smile; on the right, a tall figure in a long light dress with exaggerated rounded shoulders and a wide black band covering the eyes. Preserve erasure traces, smudges, and the fragile unfinished quality of the drawing. Keep it schematic and theatrical, not polished or narrative.

Create a sparse drawing on a light background with a tall vertical structure in the center, assembled from shifted blocks. Some sections resemble rounded masonry, others wood grain, or rock strata, or technical hatching, with thin horizontal plates crossing between heavier masses. Loose pencil loops orbit around the structure like traces of motion or unstable fields. The image should feel simultaneously like an architectural section, an organism, and a material diagram. Keep it unresolved and unstable, with no clear scale or setting.

KANDINSKY / RECONSTRUCTION

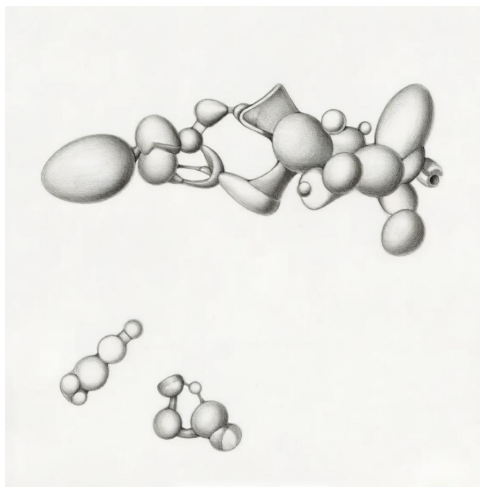

Create an image on an almost black background showing a strange four-legged creature with a long neck, large paws, and a striped body. Its head should feel somewhere between a dog, a jackal, and a mythical beast, with an elongated muzzle, pointed ears, and one alert round eye. Around its neck gathers a ring of dark clouds, above it a luminous iridescent arc, and from the clouds fall small droplets in white, pink, green, and gold. Keep the creature suspended between portrait, totem, and weather phenomenon. No landscape or fantasy-scene setting.

Create a drawing on a large white field with several groups of softly shaded geometric forms: ovals, hemispheres, truncated cones, and small spheres. These structures should suggest molecular models, insects, mechanical toys, and simplified human figures at once, without becoming any one of them. The largest group hovers in the upper area, moving left to right; two much smaller groups sit far below, separated by large empty space. Use simple pencil shading and preserve the undefined scale and open composition.

KANDINSKY / RECONSTRUCTION

Create a pen-like drawing cropped at leg level, with almost no face and very little surrounding space. Several overlapping legs emerge from beneath light clothing, wearing patterned fabric, thin light socks, and heavy dark shoes. On the floor to the right, place a large dark stain that could read as water, shadow, or unknown liquid, and a small ring-like object near its edge. Use thin lines to define floor planes, folds, and textures. The image should suggest the aftermath of an event without explaining it.

KANDINSKY / RECONSTRUCTION

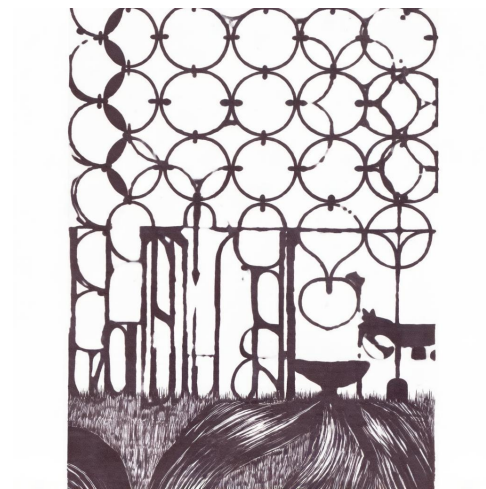

Create an image on a white background with a vertical central mass made of several dark rectangular fragments, slightly misaligned. Their surfaces should contain folds, grooves, and relief patterns that might resemble fabric, skin, bark, body imprints, or X-ray traces. Around the edges of this dense dark form, add delicate hand-drawn signs—leaves, flowers, curls, tiny figures, ornamental lines—as if they are growing from the material core. Preserve the tension between a heavy almost photographic imprint and a light manual drawing. Keep the origin of the object unresolved.

KANDINSKY / RECONSTRUCTION

Create an image structured like a strict diagram that gradually stops behaving like a diagram. In the upper half, place a grid of intersecting circles, some empty, some nearly black, with lens-like overlaps. Below, let the circles transform into vertical stripes and cut marks resembling fragments of letters or printed code. At the bottom, add dense nervous hatching that could be read as hair, grass, or signal noise. From the right, a small black animal silhouette enters the system. Keep the image balanced between geometry, writing, and living presence, without a single clear reading.

KANDINSKY / RECONSTRUCTION

Create a minimal black-on-white image using a few dense brush-like marks to suggest a human face and upper body. The face should remain open, with eyes, nose, mouth, and cheek indicated as separate marks rather than a closed contour. Through the center of the head runs a vertical stem that becomes a branching plant with large leaves above the forehead and thin roots below the neck. A few detached leaf fragments float nearby. Keep the image ambiguous between portrait and plant, as if both share one internal structure.
